

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method for providing employment salary information. The system includes an employment salary database having salary data with skill information, a user interface module to input employment parameter information including specific skills, and a processor to generate a skill matched data set by searching the employment salary database to identify salary data having the inputted specific skill associated thereto, and generate salary information based on salary data of the skill matched data set. The method includes the steps of providing an employment salary database having salary data with skill information, inputting employment parameter information including a specific skill, providing a skill matched data set by searching the employment salary database to identify salary data with the inputted skill, and generating salary information based on salary data of the skill matched data set. A data storage media having data instructions for providing employment salary information.